This work, prepared from authentic sources, and containing counsiderable matter hitherto unpublished, embraces the most interesting period in American History. The men whose lives it will contain were conspicuously connected with the Revolutionary contest, with the formation of the Constitution, with the organization of the Government, with our early negotiations with foreign powers, and, in fact, with the general political movements of their eventful times. Nor were they less honorably connected with our jurispredence. During their official terms were adjudicated those great questions of public and constitutional law which gave so much distinction to the tribunal ever which they presided and have since served as landmarks to guide our legislation and diplomacy.

A SILVER CUP to the one who comes in third best.
In order to induce those who live at a distance to contend for the prize, an ADDITIONALTEN DOLLARS will be given to the winner of the first prize who shall have come from a distance of 100 The first fifty who enter will run on Monday, July 2s, the second fifty will run on Wednesday, 29th; and the third fifty on Friday, 28th No person who may win one race will be allowed to enter for a subsequent one. Runners will be required to appear upon the Course in the following dress, vir. knee breeches, running shoen, etockings and belis. The competitors will be ranged in four lines at the starting point, across the track; the places of each to be numbered and chosen by let.

The Distance Point will be located at one-half the circumference of the Hippodrome, and any person who shall not have passed that line when the first runner comes in, shall be considered distanced, and will be required immediately to leave the ground.

The Judges Stand will be the starting point, and the place where the prizes to the victors will be awarded.

Three distinctions Judges will be appointed by the Director, by whom the prizes will be presented in presence of the audience.

The Proprietors would furthermore declare to the Public, that competition for prizes in the Foot Race is competition for prizes in the Foot Race.

Persons who wish to enter will call immediately at the Pit Office of the Hippodrome, on 24th st., where their manes will be registered, from Sofice A. M. to Sciock P. M. The Entrance Book will be open till Saturday noon.

in actual experience. One of the best personages in the story is a rude, rough-cast, nasal, and eccentric down-eater named Jacob Strong, who in the capacity of an old family servant, follows the er-ring beroine of the plot, like a sort of human angelic champion and Julia Warren, the misterious strawberry girl, and poor Florence Craft, are effectively delineated,—perhaps even too greatly diverting the attention from the principal characters of the tragic drama. In point of style, the marrative can certainly claim the merit of terse point in the forte of the author is description rather than dialogue, but she knows how to make her works 'tell' in each of these branches of composition, and rarely fails to be energetic and imprese.
